GETTING READY FOR TRIP ABROAD

President Stevens Completes Tour of Inspection Over Chesapeake and Ohio.

ROADS TO BE CONSOLIDATED

Seaboard to Take Over Atlanta-Birmingham Air Line.

President Stevens, of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, has returned to the city after a tour of the entire system, and is busily engaged in disposing of accumulated business and of all that can be anticipated before his departure on a European tour. He will leave, accompanied by his family next Thursday, for a transatlantic tour, which includes visits to several European points. The party will spend about six weeks or two months abroad. Among other matters engaging the attention of the executive is that of contracts for building a new steel bridge over the Chesapeake, which negotiations are in progress. The Chesapeake and Ohio has become a large buyer of these big fifty-ton steel girders, and now proposes to buy more. Representatives of the Pressed Steel Car Works, of Pittsburgh, are in the city in connection with this prospective contract, and it will probably be signed within the ensuing week.

District Passenger Agent Warthen is detained at his home by reason of sickness. He was at his office for a time yesterday, and hopes to be regularly at work to-day.

The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway steamer, Virginia, plying between Newport News and Norfolk, has just resumed service on that route after undergoing its thorough annual overhauling. During its retirement the old Louise has been substituting. The Louise has just been sold by the company, and will disappear from the Norfolk-Newport News route after a service covering many years. The old boat brought $5,000.

Among the well known visitors in the city yesterday was Mr. Arthur C. Lewis, city passenger agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with headquarters at Norfolk. He also represents the Washington Steamboat Company, the Bay Line and the Chesapeake Line of steamers, and does considerable newspaper work and finds time to contribute to magazine literature occasionally.

The consolidation of the Atlanta and Birmingham Air Line and the Seaboard Air Line, which owns the majority of their stock, is now about to be consummated. The Atlanta-Birmingham line was built for the Seaboard in order to enable it to reach the great Southern iron and steel center.

Mr. A. W. Anderson, the new general superintendent of the Atlantic Coast Line, succeeding Mr. W. N. Royall, promoted, was formerly superintendent of the Charleston and Western Carolina.

The Senate Committee, having in charge the rate investigation, will meet and resume its investigations April 17th. It is expected that the committee will be prepared to submit its report to the Senate in the autumn, and it is regarded as practically certain that a majority report will be offered also.

An agreement has been reached relative to grain and corn rates by the Gulf and Atlantic seaboard lines or shipments.

SCIENCE'S VIEW OF HUMAN SOUL

Dr. W. H. Taylor Discusses the Relation of Mind and Matter.

MAN PRODUCT OF THE APES

Discourse Delivered to Class in Medical Jurisprudence Attracting Wide Attention.

The recent lecture of Dr. W. H. Taylor, professor of chemistry, toxicology and medical jurisprudence at the Medical College of Virginia, in which the doctor discussed before his class in medical jurisprudence the subject of "Science and the Soul," has attracted wide attention. This discourse was introductory to a series on "The Occult." It was altogether a class lecture, not intended for the public. No one outside of this particular class was invited to it, not even the other students of the college.

At the outset Dr. Taylor said: "Of the several manifestations of the many-sided occultism of modern times, the one that we can most advantageously consider is spiritualism—not only on its own account, but because of the close relation which many forms of superstition, mysticism and pseudo science have to it. Its primary and necessary proposition is that man possesses an immaterial principle which is capable of activity existing apart from the material body. This proposition is true, it is not impossible that living men may get into communication with the dead. If it is not true the suggestion of such communication carries its absurdity on its face, and a great mass of parastic superstitions will be swept away."

He went on to say that familiarity with the dead created an impression of materiality of soul as well as body, but that impressions were the most unsafe of all means of attaining scientific truth, and suggested that if materialists would take the higher view which might be afforded by religion, perhaps they would be converted into idealists or spiritualists. "Scientists, however, were necessarily restricted to physical methods, and he went on to ask what could be learned by use of the scalpel, microscope, test-tube and other scientific implements? Starting with the humblest living cell, he traced its development onward and upward to man. In doing this he gave reasons why scientists, by reference to day claim that man is lineally descended from the apes. He next considered the development of man himself from a minute cell and pointed out its course through childhood into adult age, showing that all along consciousness, and whatever of the soul is akin to consciousness, is parallel with the development of the brain. This was emphasized by reference to numerous well known admitted facts connected with the functions of the body and of the brain especially.

ORIGIN OF LIFE.
He next took up the subject of the material origin of life itself. This was elaborately set forth, and on the strength of the fact that the body is pre-eminently a chemical laboratory, he considered the question could be fairly answered by assigning the origin to chemical action. Going still further, using various illustrations drawn from inorganic nature, he people to conjecture that life in some vague form might originate in matter which, in our ignorance of its nature, we are wont to ascribe to spirit. In concluding this branch of his theme, he spoke of the pioneers of science of this time who are urging people to take a further step onward—a final, a portentous step—which will place people where matter and electricity are one, and asked, Shall they take it? To this question he did not feel competent to reply.

Dr. Taylor's lecture was an address of a medical man to other medical men, and taking a strictly scientific view of the relation of the soul as far as it can be considered as allied to consciousness, to physical and chemical changes going on in the brain. He carefully avoided any collision with theological or religious opinions or beliefs, and maintained the utmost respect for the very varied religious opinions of his audience. He gave no opinion of his own on the subject, but after stating the facts as recognized by all medical and other scientific men, he asked his hearers to draw their own conclusions from them, reminding them that it was not his business to guide them in the matter. His class has expressed themselves as entirely satisfied with his considerate way of handling this very delicate subject.

SERIOUS QUESTION.
He stated that the question is one not to be answered off-hand by the microscope or test-tube or other implements employed by science, and that very possibly the laboratory did not supply all the elements necessary for solving this stupendous problem. In summing up Dr. Taylor said: "This, then, is the lesson we have learned; that the phenomena to which we give the name of soul are inextricably connected with the physiological functions of the brain; that they have their origin in the far off organic world and were inherent attributes of potentially inorganic matter. Thus, as we read the record, has begun and proceeded through untold ages the majestic march, starting from the dust of the earth, at length presents the vertebrate, the mammal, the ape, the body and the soul of man. All along our instructor has been nature herself. We feel that we have been docile and earnestly attentive pupils, yet daunted by the stupendous outcome confronting us, we have a mingling that, hapt and incapable, we may not, after all, have understood her teaching aright."

OLD TRINITY IS TO BE TORN DOWN

Historic Methodist Church on Franklin Street Soon to be Replaced.

An important and interesting real estate deal, one which will mean the disappearance of an old landmark of early Richmond and the construction on the same site of a large, modern business firm, was concluded yesterday.

Mr. E. A. Catlin, real estate dealer, in the city, has sold to Mr. J. T. Nuckolls, contractor, the historic building and site at the corner of Franklin Street and Exchange Alley, which was owned by the late Mr. J. T. Nuckolls, and which was the site of the historic Methodist Church of the city. Negotiations have also been completed which will result in the pulling down of the old church and immediate erection on the site of a large, modern four-story business house, which will be occupied by the wholesale dry goods firm of Wilkinson, Williams and Reed.

The specifications for the prospective structure call for the use of stock brick, and in arrangement the building will be adapted to use as a storehouse and warehouse.

The old building to be razed to make way for business is one of the notable structures of old Richmond. It is the old Trinity Church, the former house of worship of the Methodist congregation now worshipping at Twentieth and Broad Streets. When the church was first established in this city, about the year 1800, the minister preached at the State Capitol on Sunday afternoons. Rev. Thomas Lyell being the first minister ever regularly assigned to this place. The first church was built at the southeast corner of Franklin Street and Exchange Alley, and while not known by name, was the first Trinity. This was the first Methodist church erected in Richmond.

The Present Building.

It was in 1828 that the second church, known as the new Trinity, was constructed and opened for worship. This church stood on the site of the property just sold, but it was not long before, in 1833 the church was burned, and the congregation had to seek quarters elsewhere. The congregation soon rallied, and raised a new house of worship on the site of the one burned.
